RENEWALS — The date with your name on wrapper shows to what time your subscription is paid. Thus, Jan. 25 shows that payment has been received up to Jan., 1925. When payment is made, the date on wrapper, which answers for a receipt, is changed; if this is not done, write.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — Subscribers wishing their addresses changed, must give their old address (both postoffice and state) as well as new address.

MISSING COPIES — Should your magazine not arrive within a few days of the usual time, write. If you wait weeks we may be out of the issue wanted.

SPECIAL NOTICE — When renewing, writing about change of address or missing copies, be sure to sign your name exactly the same as it appears on the wrapper of your H-T-T. — this helps us wonderfully.

DISCONTINUE — Your H-T-T will be promptly stopped at expiration of time paid for unless your renewal is received. Date on wrapper shows when paid to, yet it is best to renew a month or two in advance. However, at about the time you receive last issue notice will be sent.

HOW TO REMIT — Money orders, either express or postoffice, as well as checks and drafts are safe — if lost, can be duplicated.

THE PASSING OF AN ELEPHANT

THEODORE R. HUBBACK

THE readers of Outdoor Life need no introduction to Theodore R. Hubback for his writings have appeared in this magazine many years. In this story he tells of an encounter with a large elephant in a Malayan jungle which came near writing finis to the life of this prominent sportsman and game conservationist. We have read of charging grizzlies and of fighting game of all species, but for a change in thrills nothing surpasses an account of the doings of a mad elephant, written by the man who experienced it.

THE ALASKAN BROWN BEAR

DR. WILL CHASE

THIS is the second installment of Dr. Chase's story which begins in this number. Next month the writer gives us an insight into the life of the great Alaskan brown bear during the second and third years of its life. Dr. Chase has spent years in the study of this noble game animal and the observations he has made are not the result of reading what others have seen, nor of time spent in watching captive animals in a zoo; his knowledge has been gained by watching them in their native haunts, and by association with specimens he has taken for the purpose.

IDAHO BIG GAME—MOSTLY BEARS

JACK RUSSEL

AN INTERESTING narrative by a California sportsman who journeyed to Idaho on the trail of Bruin, and other big game. Grouse and prairie chicken hunting and trout fishing added variety to the sport, and on the way home the writer stopped off in his own state for a round with the geese. Taken as a whole, this trip came about as near to the all around hunt as it is possible to get for it included dog work—both bird dog and trail hound. Read of this great game country.

LES'N GO!

CAPT. FRANK DOUDERA

THE concluding installment of the story starting in this issue, giving the writer's experience during a hunt in British Columbia. Next month will appear another story by the editor—a story of sailfishing on the Florida Reefs, and of ocean fishing in canoes. The Arms and Ammunition department will be a winner, and you will not be disappointed in Angling. In fact next month will be a number you can not afford to miss, and we have many more good stories for future numbers.

BIG GAME IN THE YUKON PLATT KISSAM

"OFF for the Yukon! Those magic words less than three short decades ago telegraphed a wondrous picture to the mind's eye; brought visions of a land of promise, a land of adventure and romance—and gold! Always gold! But to us, my friend William Wagner and I, the lure was not material wealth; rather, our visions were filled with pictures of big-game trophies, of a grand and glorious vacation, of relaxation, in the land of the fast-vanishing sourdough. And who can say that this, too, was not romance?" That is the beginning of Mr. Kissam's interesting story—the story of a remarkably successful hunt in a country where big game still abounds. It will be in the April number.

A SPRING GOBBLER HUNT HARRY LEE WILLIAMS

THE fine story of a wild turkey hunt in the foothills of the Arkansas Ozarks; relating the joy, thrill and supreme satisfaction experienced by one fortunate enough to call up, outwit and bring to bag the king of American game birds. "On the Trail of the Festive Rainbow," by Robert C. Franks, is a worth-while trout-fishing story; in which the author writes intimately of his experiences in an ideal angling and vacation country; of a beautiful stream and lake, and rugged, pine-clad mountains that are unsurpassed in scenic grandeur. "An Antelope Hunt in the Sierra Leone," by F. R. Birch, is the absorbing account of a great hunt in West Africa as the guest of a tribal chieftain.

Mixed Bags in the Caribou

DELPHINE MCCLELLAN

"Hurry off with the jackets, boys; grab the old towel and dash over to the spring, because the big banquet is on tonight, and after one glance at the grub line-up you'll meet yourself coming back for more." And their menu reads like a sportsman's dream, because this party of big-game hunters found the "Happy Hunting Grounds" up in the Caribou District of British Columbia and succeeded in bagging a splendid variety of trophies. It is the well-told story of an enjoyable trip, a beautiful, rugged country, and thrilling experiences.

Ducks

"The flight had begun in earnest. Whiz-whiz-whiz! they came whirling down—mallards, bluebills, canvasbacks, redheads—it was a mixture of them, all scattered and mingled, wild in the blinding snow—thousands of them! And for a time the shooting was of the sort that one dreams about but rarely experiences." But that is the hope, the ambition, of every duck hunter—to be in on the big flight—to be there when they come down in myriads so as to fairly darken the sky. You will enjoy reading of such a flight in this entertaining story.

A Father and Son Hunt in Alaska

C. E. SYKES

ONE of the most interesting, unique and altogether worthwhile father and son stories ever published. The author, one of America's premier big-game hunters and sportsmen, took his 11-year-old boy on an extended trip into the White River district of Alaska, in order that the lad might obtain some big-game trophies with which to decorate a Boy Scout hut. The youngster performed like a veteran, negotiating the rough spots with a whistle and contagious grin, and in truth was the life of the party. Replete with adventure and thrills, the story also portrays thruout an admirable spirit of comradeship and understanding between a father and his son. It will run in two big consecutive installments, of which the first will appear in July. Read it!

Pointers on Prairie Chickens

GUY W. VON SCHRILTZ

A ROLICKING, humorous, well-told story of prairie chicken and bob white quail shooting on the Kansas plains, with Old Whip and Comanche Rap, two excellent dogs of the pointer strain, working prettily in typical chicken country, where the birds were plentiful and covey after covey was flushed to offer sporting shots and resultant satisfactory bags for the fortunate hunters. You will enjoy reading it in the August number.

Fins and Furious Fun

O. W. SMITH

IN WHICH the Angling Editor offers a contribution, more or less serious, to the literature of bass fly fishing. Replete with action and worth-while information. Also, there will be the second and concluding installment of C. E. Sykes' exceptional big-game hunting narrative, "A Father and Son Hunt in Alaska." All who read the first installment will be eagerly awaiting the second. A story in a thousand and well worth waiting for.
